A MESSAGE FROM OUR EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

We are a warm and welcoming synagogue family, where each person matters. This has never been truer than it is today. In the past we may have taken for granted the times we came together to pray, learn, or spend time with one another. We are now in an unprecedented moment, a time when we are most in need of each other. We have been directed to distance ourselves physically from one another, but social distancing does not and should not mean isolation.

Your Temple clergy, professional staff, and lay leaders are working tirelessly to find inspired and creative ways to stay connected with you. We will continue to be available to you and your family through meaningful online events through streaming and Zoom, phone calls, and videos until we can joyfully be together again! We will continue to find ways to bring meaning and joy to one another and support our most vulnerable congregants during this crisis.

We are just a phone call away and WE ARE HERE FOR YOU. This is not the time to hesitate - please let us know if you want to connect with our clergy.

Thanks to the generosity of our Temple families, we have been able to support our staff and continue to meet the needs of our community since the start of this crisis. We want to offer our profound gratitude for your ongoing and valued support, which helps us maintain the financial resources needed to focus our time, people, and energy to where our community needs it most. In particular, continuing support for our members, especially those who may feel isolated, through personal outreach, online resources, and continued engagement, is a top priority.

Most importantly, we are in this together. We are standing by one another during this difficult time and ask that you stand with us. We want to work with you to navigate this challenge while at the same time continue to financially support our synagogue family.

If you need us, please reach out. If you are experiencing financial challenges, if membership dues are a strain at this time, if you need help finding resources, please reach out. If you want to talk, please reach out. WE ARE HERE FOR YOU.

L'Shalom u'Vracha, in peace and blessing,
Christie Yonkers, Executive Director

WE ARE HERE FOR YOU! Point of Contact is Allison Shippy, Director of Member Services. She can be reached via email at ashippy@ttti.org or phone at 216.245.9686.

FROM THE RABBI'S STUDY

As we enter the third month of the coronavirus pandemic's impact in this country, let us recognize the courage, tenacity, generosity, and kindness expressed by so many, and the hope that we may draw from the collective effort to contain this virus. If we learn one important lesson from this painful episode, it is that at moments of loss, pain, fear, and discomfort we have found ways to support each other and act responsibly, conscientiously, and thoughtfully to protect ourselves and others. Beyond the extraordinary commitment of medical and other front-line service providers and professionals as well as a wide range of essential workers, our greater community is exhibiting signs of strength, stamina, and spirit that bode well for our future.

In noticing and appreciating communal strength and support, we draw inspiration from the scroll of Ruth, a narrative that unfolds during the Omer – the seven weeks separating Passover and Shavuot (in the Gregorian calendar, the weeks of April and May). Ruth and Naomi's story is anchored in pain and loss. Naomi and her husband Elimelech leave their native Judea for Moab because of a famine. There, Elimelech dies, as do Naomi's two sons, and a hopeless Naomi, accompanied by Ruth, a Moabite daughter-in-law, makes her way back to Judea. Upon her return to Bethlehem, she urges those who recognize her to cease calling her Naomi (meaning "God's comfort" in Hebrew) and renames herself Marra (meaning bitterness.) The opening of Naomi's story resembles the end of a dark tragedy. Yet, alongside the loss and the pain, Naomi and Ruth's entire story is punctuated with expressions of humanity, compassion, and kindness. Following the death of her two sons, both her daughters-in-law express the wish to join Naomi on the journey back to her native land. Naomi's separation from one of her daughters-in-law, Orpah, is accompanied by tears, compassion, and the final kiss of departure. Ruth's determination to remain with Naomi, her pronouncement of loyalty to and love for Naomi, endures as the most touching, moving biblical articulation of shared values, purpose, and fate. Then, upon their arrival in Bethlehem, Ruth and Naomi depend upon and benefit from the support of a relative, Boaz; Ruth is sustained and protected through the harvest season, and in turn sustains Naomi. Boaz' message to Ruth "I have been told of all that you did for your mother-in-law after the death of your husband, how you left your father and mother and the land of your birth and came to a people you had not known before. May the Source of Being reward your deeds. May you have a full recompense from the Source of Life, the God of Israel, under whose wings you have sought refuge!" (Ruth 2:11-12) suggests deep consciousness of the widows' pain and need, and a willful determination to support them. As we know, this biblical masterpiece ends with the wedding of Boaz and Ruth and the arrival of new life – a celebration for both Ruth and Naomi. This Shavuot story is rendered all the more remarkable by the identification of Boaz as the descendant of Peretz – the son of Judah and his daughter-in-law Tamar, a child conceived in deception and alienation. At the same time, the union of Boaz and Ruth is clearly identified as the cornerstone of the Davidic line. Thus, in a stroke of genius, the biblical author identifies King David as the descendant of a problematic union between Judah and Tamar on the one hand, and a Moabite woman – Ruth, on the other.

We learn a great deal from the story of Ruth and Naomi, and especially about cohesion, compassion, and support: The values of commitment to others in their moments of need, and a capacity to encounter their human stories and share our human gifts with them remain inspirational to us. The voluntarism and concern that so many among us have shown to others in our greater community are a living testament to these values. They constitute yet another demonstration of the depth of our reservoirs of communal resilience and love – reservoirs of the waters of life that sustain healthy, strong communities. May we continue to experience humanity in our encounters with those who come to find shelter among us and under God's wing. May we always be attentive to human stories, the narratives of human lives. May we remain generous and compassionate toward those who experience pain and need and extend to them our assistance and support. The blessings of new life and its endless potential will surely emerge. May this be God's will.

– Rabbi Jonathan Cohen

MONTHLY BOOK DISCUSSION

Wednesday, May 13 at 1:00 PM via Zoom: <https://zoom.us/j/291974824>

Rabbi Roger C. Klein will review Have a Little Faith: A True Story by Mitch Albom

Have a Little Faith begins with an unusual request: an 82-year-old rabbi asks Mitch Albom to deliver his eulogy. Feeling unworthy, Albom asks to understand the man better by visiting him away from the pulpit, and over time is moved to learn how human the Man of God really is. Meanwhile, Albom becomes involved in helping a Detroit pastor, an ex-con who now preaches to the poor and homeless in a decaying church with a hole in its roof. As America struggles with hard times and people turn more to their beliefs, Albom realizes a striking unity between these two worlds. And as the rabbi fights to stay alive and the pastor fights to keep his church afloat, Albom finally understands what both men had been teaching him all along: the profound comfort of believing in something bigger than yourself. Have a Little Faith is a book about the divine spark inside us all. It is one man's journey, but it is everyone's story. The monthly book discussion is generously sponsored by the Debra Jacobs Book Discussion Fund.
